

Press Release

Wimborne woman wins £500 for paying water bill online

11 May 2012

Fiona Bilton receives her £500 cheque from Roger Harrington, SBW's Managing Director (right) watched by Mike Sylvester, IT Projects Manager.

A Wimborne woman is £500 better off thanks to paying her water bill online. Fiona Bilton won a draw organised by electronic billing service MyBillsOnline. She's the latest customer of Sembcorp Bournemouth Water (SBW) to have her name selected.

"The news came totally out of the blue. I'm very pleased," said Fiona who works as a quality assistant with Lymington electronics company, Gill Instruments.

Currently on the final module of a four year degree course in international business and management at Bournemouth University, she added: "Paying for my water online is really easy and convenient. I'd recommend it to other people."

MyBillsOnline has now launched a new prize draw for SBW customers with the chance to win £500 between now and September 30.

Roger Harrington, SBW's Managing Director, said: "Our customers are increasingly expecting us to provide them with easy to use services such as being able to pay on-line. We are delighted that Fiona has won £500 as a result of our promotion of this facility."

SBW was one of the first organisations to sign up for the electronic billing service which gives customers a more convenient way to view, manage and pay their water bills.

The secure service is free, easy to use, doesn't require multiple passwords and reduces the need to send paper bills through the post.

Full details can be found at www.mybillsonline.co.uk